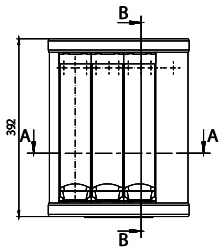
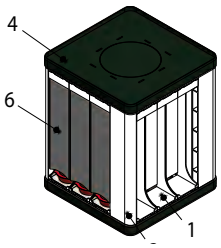
Company Overview

Design and Visualisation



CAD drawing



When developing new products, CAD technology is used to create a 3D draft of the product. The benefit of CAD technology is that the rest of the development process is based on these original digital drawings. This process can include sampling, prototyping, making of dies/tools, plastic extruding, injection moulding, laser cutting, bending, milling or stamping. The CAD drawings ensure that the quality is constant throughout.

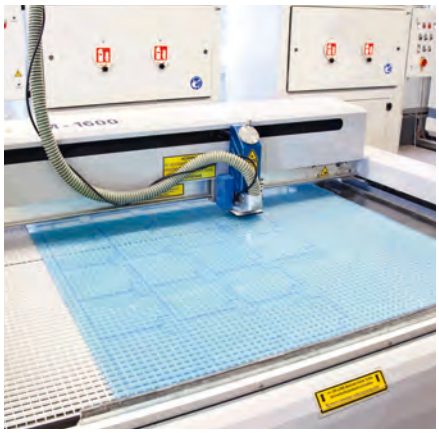
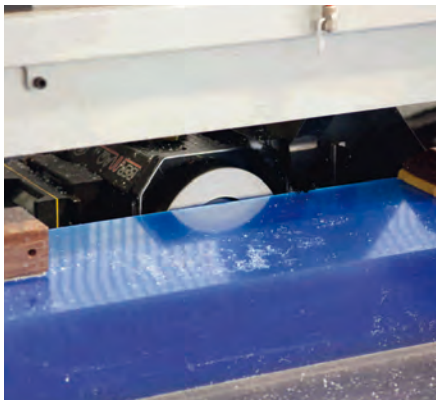
Finished product

Acrylic Processing

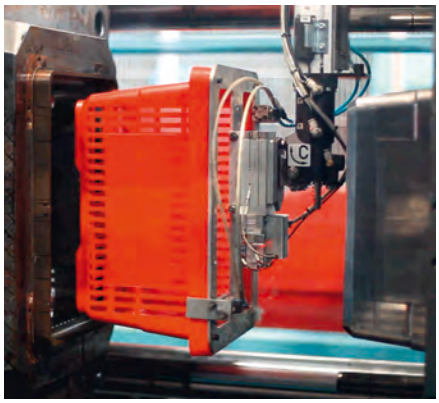


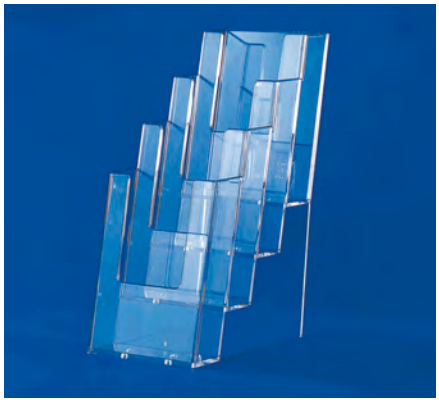


We use a wide range of techniques to produce our acrylic products to guarantee the highest quality items. The acrylic is shaped by laser cutting, CNC milling, polishing, bending, gluing and assembling. Using a combination of machine precision and skilled hand work, raw materials are transformed into complex and durable products.
In addition to our standard items we also offer a bespoke design service.

Injection Moulding

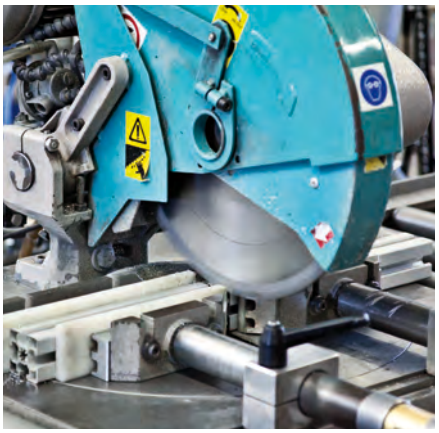
This process allows products to be mass produced and used straight away with no further finishing. The moulding material is injected into the tool. The hollow in the tool defines the shape of the finished product. It is possible to manufacture components from only a fraction of a gram up to several kilograms in weight. We have many years experience in this field.
We have over 300 different tools available, allowing us to manufacture a range of products such as poster frames, leaflet dispensers and clips. In machinery with a locking pressure between 250 to 4200 kN we process thermoplastics using single or multi component moulding to create parts of up to 1936 g.





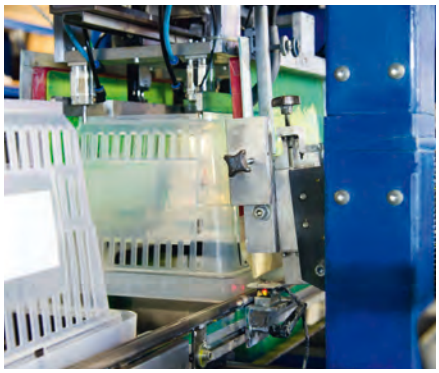
Aluminium Processing

High quality aluminium products can be made in a short timescale in our own workshop. Standard products can be customised so that they meet your specific requirements.
As a manufacturer we use processes such as extrusion, sawing, milling, lasering and embossing as well as bending, powder coating and anodising to manipulate both profiles and metal sheets to order.
Specialised machinery with digital measuring devices is used to handle profile.



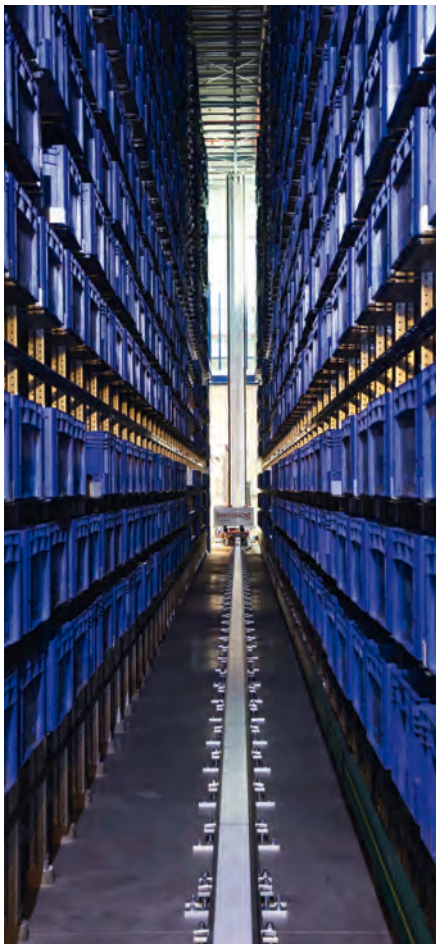
Company Overview

Printing



At our site in Isselburg, we offer silk screen, digital, transfer, pad and textile printing methods. Many of our products such as acrylic displays, shelf barkers, banners, giveaways and T-shirts can be customised using these methods. Let us help you promote your company!

Warehousing and Logistics



With our extensive warehouse space and modern storage systems, we despatch stock orders rapidly. Our goods are packed in sturdy, recyclable materials. We can also assemble, repackage and hold goods on request. Goods are despatched using economical, reputable couriers and freight forwarders. Express shipments and overnight shipments may also be possible for an additional charge.
